HISTORICAL NOTE

Webster County, located in the southern tier of counties approximately 150 miles west of the Missouri River, was first settled by whites in the spring of 1870. The first group consisted of nineteen members of the Rankin colony of Omaha and a second group arrived from Beatrice later that same year. On April 19, 1871 an election was held to organize the county and to locate the county seat, although the boundaries had earlier been defined by State Legislative act approved February 16, 1867. The organization of the county was approved by the voters and the county seat was located at Red Cloud. This community, the first in the county, was settled by Silas Garber, and was conveniently located in relation to the more densely populated portion of the county.

Webster County was named in honor of Daniel Webster (1782-1852), the American Statesman.
